ERIE RAILROAD LEASES SHOPS AT MARION, OHIO, TO PRIVATE REPAIR CO.

Action May Cause Labor Board to Decide on Inquiry Into Case.

FIVE HUNDRED AFFECTED

By Associated Press.

MARION, O., Aug. 15.—The Erie Railroad company today announced that its local shops had been leased by the Railway Service company of Marion and would be operated by that concern, beginning immediately.

The service company is an organization founded by local bankers and capitalists and it will take over all the repair and other work now done in the shops.

Announcement of this plan of operation was made by W. A. Baldwin, manager of the Ohio region of the railroad, who declared that all repair work formerly done here by the railroad would be continued under direction of the new company.

Between 400 and 500 persons are now employed in the shops.

Mr. Baldwin's statement said the plan was adopted with the idea that "local conditions can be best appreciated and most intelligently met by the knowledge and interest of local supervision and support."

Much of the maintenance and construction work of the railroad has heretofore been done by contractors in communities through which the railroad runs.

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Announcement that the Erie railroad had leased its Marion, O., shops and roundhouse to a local operating company which will handle the road's repair work may bring intervention by the United States Railroad Labor Board if there is any evidence of a concerted plan on the part of the roads to follow the practice generally, a member of the board said today.

Fire at Oil Plant Claims Two Lives And Million Loss

By Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 15—The fire at the Point Breeze oil plant of the Atlantic Refining company in which five persons were killed and nearly a score injured was extinguished today after a battle of more than 24 hours by virtually the entire city fire department.

One of the injured, John H. Grum, was burned so badly that physicians did not expect him to recover.

Five tanks, each containing 20,000 barrels, four agitator tanks with a capacity of 4,000 barrels each, three pump houses and a number of pipe lines were destroyed. The loss is estimated at $1,000,000.

The fire broke out again today shortly after the firemen had returned to the fire houses. A roaring pillar of flame shot a hundred feet into the air from a sewer fed by 20,000 gallons of oil by-products. All of this it was feared would be destroyed.

The new blaze started when workmen clearing up the debris of the first fire opened a hydraulic gate valve carrying off the residue from the destroyed stills.

Fifty streams of water from as many hose lines had no effect on the fire. Firemen expected to be able to confine the new blaze to the sewer but there was little hope of saving the by-products.

Hundred Sixty Eat Sunday at Boy Scout Camp

Rain or no rain, the visitors that went up to the Boy Scout camp at Rogers Mill yesterday morning had a fine time and some of them think it was worth it, even if just for the dinner. There were 99 guests in camp and close to 160 counting the Scouts. They were all given plenty of good grub, that was well cooked. The menu was as follows: Veal barbecue, corn muffins, mashed potatoes, peas, gravy, bread and butter, ice cream and cake. The women and children were given the dining hall to eat in, while the men ate outside. Although it did rain some, there were a few hours in between times when the tests were given for the merit badges. Those that received merit badges from the Court of Honor were: Claude Dawson, electricity; Franklin Edmunds, better known as "Bud," pioneering and swimming; Ralph Gillo, swimming and life saving.

Every one in camp attended the church services which were in charge of W. F. Underwood.

The officials in charge of the camp state that they heard nothing but fine expressions passed in regard to the condition of the boys and the interest that they had taken in their camp to make it one of the best in the valley. The Scouts have built a fine bridge across the creek just to show what they really are learning. Scout Commissioner R. C. Witt states he has given 98 second class tests and 34 first class tests while he was in camp.

The following boys have passed the tests for the second class Scout badges: Ralph Buttermore, Robert Whipkey, Jack Goldsmith, Herbert Carpenter, Joe May, Russel Wiant, John Edmunds, Franklin Butler and Charles Evans, and those in the first class are Dan Smith, William Cecil, Charles Uhls, Samuel Melnick and Edward Bitner.

Commissioner Witt returned last night from the camp and during the remaining week tests will be given by Camp Director A. R. Skomp and Scoutmaster Roger Lininger. The Scouts will break camp next Monday.

Colored Scouts Break Camp After Two-Week Outing

Troop No. 6 of this city, colored Boy Scouts, broke camp yesterday after spending two weeks at White Bridge. The name was changed to Camp Wildwood and it was declared to be the best camp that the boys have had so far. There was no sickness reported and all the boys had a fine time. Scoutmaster J. H. Carpenter was in charge of the troop and Lloyd Hamilton, his assistant, was camp director.

On Friday the Scouts played the Normalville baseball team at the camp and held them scoreless for five innings and then the game was called on account of darkness. The Normalville team recently whitewashed the Boy Scouts at Camp Pohawk.

There were 18 Scouts at Camp Wildwood. Five boys passed the tenderfoot test, three the second-class test, and four completed their first-class tests. There were 25 visitors at the camp on Sunday.

Must Take Up Cause Of Policeman, Sec. of Labor Davis Declares

READING, Aug. 15.—"It is high time that we, the citizens who profit by the policemen's protection, should take up the policeman's cause. If he cannot plead his own cause we must plead it for him. It is time we think of him as a man like ourselves. After years of benefits at his hands let us exert ourselves in his behalf."

So spoke Secretary of Labor Davis at the national convention of the Fraternal Order of Police which convened here today. Mr. Davis added:

"We must make this heroic American, the policeman, the equivalent of what he owns in our service. We must see that his children and his wife are secure if danger should take his life."

IRISH FIND PEACE PREFERABLE, HOPE FOR CONTINUANCE

People Look to Republican Parliament to Prevent Parley Rupture

SITUATION ONE OF GRAVITY

By Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Aug. 15.—The people of Ireland, who have enjoyed a month of peace, found it hard today to believe that negotiation between Eamonn de Valera and Prime Minister Lloyd George were at the breaking point. They were placing their hope in the Irish republican parliament to consider the correspondence and frame a reply to the prime minister's latest letter.

Suggestion had been made that the parliament may propose submission to a plebiscite.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—England today faced a critical period in the negotiations looking to the establishment of peace in Ireland. The action of the British government in making public a letter between Lloyd George and Eamonn de Valera that a virtual deadlock existed and although the door is open for further parleys apparent situation was one of considerable gravity.

Reports from Dublin which might indicate what the Irish republicans would do to counter the unexpected move of the government in giving the correspondence on peace overtures to the press were anxiously awaited. It appeared the next step should be made in that city as Mr. Lloyd George literally laid his cards on the table yesterday and it seems Mr. De Valera and his colleagues must meet the situation thus created.

WAYNESBURG GETS NEXT REUNION OF "FIGHTING TENTH"

Twelve Hundred Attend Annual Gathering Saturday Near Greensburg.

COL. CRAGO PRESIDENT

GREENSBURG, Aug. 15.—In one of nature's cozy corners, Maple Lodge, the 22nd annual reunion of the "Fighting Tenth" regiment was held Saturday, more than 300 veterans of that command who saw service in the Philippines being present. In addition as guests at the reunion were members of the G. A. R. and 110th Regiment, veterans of the World War and many civilian friends of members of the old command. The crowd numbered something over 1,200.

The committees under the guidance of Colonel Henry W. Coulter and R. H. Jamison had fully done their duty and every detail had been looked after. Early trains brought the veterans from all parts of Western Pennsylvania. They registered at the State Armory and each veteran was handed a beautiful bronze badge as a memorial of the occasion. Cars were in waiting to convey them to Maple Lodge, 12 miles distant.

Arrived at the grounds everything was running in perfect order. The day was perfect. The present Tenth Regiment band and the 110th Regiment overseas band played at intervals throughout the day.

Great tables had been spread in the open and members of the present Company I of the 110th Regiment and headquarters company acted as waiters. Seats had been provided for 1,000. The great ox shipped from Chicago was cooked to a turn and the trimmings of the meal were all first class. Every one had all that he could eat. During the serving of the meal Red Harris' Melody Six played.

Booths had been arranged about the ground where light refreshments could be procured during the day.

Daylight fireworks proved a novelty of the noon hour. Great explosions overhead caused the diners to look skyward to see opening before their eyes parachutes attached to which were big American flags.

The business meeting of the "Fighting Tenth" veterans was presided over by Richard H. Jamison of Greensburg. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Lieutenant Colonel Thomas S. Crago, Washington, Pa.; vice-president, Captain Gustav W. Schaff; secretary, Lieutenant Jones McGee, Charleroi; treasurer, James E. Gee, Monongahela City.

Brief addresses were made by some of the veterans. General Richard Coulter of Greensburg was given a rousing cheer when he mounted the rostrum to speak. Others who spoke were Captain Robert G. Woodside of Pittsburg, Colonel James E. Barnett, Washington; Colonel Edward Martin, Waynesburg; Congressman Thomas S. Crago, Washington; Major B. S. Cuthbertson, Beaver; Major Everhart Bierer, Uniontown, and Colonel Joseph Thompson, Denver.

Waynesburg was selected as the place for holding the next reunion.

Law Enforcement League Officially Announces Its Entrance Into City Affairs

The Law Enforcement league of Connellsville stepped out into the light at the union church services Sunday evening at which time first official announcement was made of the aims and purposes of the organization, which was formed some time ago and which has been quietly at work since.

The membership of the league now is over 300 leading citizens pledged to see that the provisions to the national and state laws governing liquor are enforced, according to announcement. No part will be taken in the election or in politics in any way, it was said.

Announcement of the formation of the league was made as the introductory to an address by Dr. Homer Tope of Philadelphia, head of the Anti-Saloon league of the state. It was made known at the same time that this was but the first of a series of public meetings which will be held to create sentiment favorable to law enforcement.

Following the address of Dr. Tope the nucleus of a fund for financing the work of the league was raised by pledge and cash contribution.

Dr. Tope declared the present the crucial period in the work of placing national prohibition on a safe and sound basis. The liquor interests are now engaged, he said, in their dying struggle, which is also the fiercest. "Hold steady for a few years and the thing will be settled and settled for all time," he declared.

Dr. Tope said the operations of bootleggers and other violators of the law are confined to nine states. There is no trouble in the other 39, he said.

Rev. G. W. Buckner presided over the meeting. The invocation was delivered by Rev. J. S. Showers, Rev. I. R. Fletcher read the Scripture lesson and Rev. J. L. Proudfit offered prayer. The Methodist Episcopal choir sang. Miss Loreen Struble, member of the body, contributed a solo.

Ira H. Hess, Well Known Teacher, Dies Suddenly

Ira H. Hess, 45 years old, superintendent of the Redstone township schools, and widely known in educational circles throughout Fayette county, died Sunday night of apoplexy at his home at Merrittstown. Mr. Hess visited in Uniontown Sunday afternoon leaving for his home shortly after 5 o'clock. Following his arrival home about 7:15 o'clock he complained of feeling ill and died at 7:30 o'clock.

Mr. Hess was born and reared in the Merrittstown region, a son of the late Louis and Elizabeth Hess. He spent virtually all his life there. He was graduated from two normal schools and for 30 years was a factor on the educational life in Fayette county. He was rounding out his eighth year as superintendent of public instruction in the Merrittstown schools. Previous to his election to the head of the schools of Redstone township he was principal of the township high school.

As a teacher, principal and instructor, Ira B. Hess numbered among the best and most efficient in the county; as a citizen he typified that which is strong of character and keen of mind, best in American civilized life. He was a member of the Dunlaps Creek Presbyterian church, and was active in church, civic and educational circles and his death removes from these circles a man whose worth was everywhere recognized. Politically, he was a Republican. He never sought any county offices, rather devoting his time to educational enterprise. He was regular in his church attendance, having been a leader in the affairs of the "Old Stone" church.

He was identified with the Brownsville B. P. O. E., the Junior Order of Merrittstown and the Brownsville Lodge of the I. O. O. F. Deceased was known to practically every teacher and citizen in the county and he was affectionately spoken of as the "Dean of the Teachers." As a leader in his profession, Mr. Hess frequently was named to state educational conventions. His voice was always raised in the interests and welfare of advanced education. His services as a member of educational advisory boards were always very much in demand.

Surviving is his wife, Nellie Garwood Hess, one son, Oliver, aged 15, and an infant daughter, all at home, as also three brothers, Virgil, of Merrittstown, Col. Louis Hess, surgeon in the United States Regular Army, now stationed at Colon, Panama, and William Hess, Pittsburg.

Absence of Priest Fails to Interfere

The Chicago Herald-Examiner, under date of August 13, printed the following relative to the marriage of Miss Genovieve Soisson of Connellsville and Attorney Rupert D. Donovan of Marengo, Ill.:

"Cupid laughed at Mars yesterday when a matter of superstition became involved with the matrimonial plans of Attorney Rupert D. Donovan of Marengo and Miss Genovieve Soisson of Connellsville, Pa.

"They had planned to marry yesterday and had chosen Rev. E. F. Rice to perform the rites. He had been chaplain of the 122nd Field Artillery, A. E. F., in which Mr. Donovan served as captain. When they telephoned Father Rice they discovered he was at Camp Grant with the Second Field Artillery, I. N. G., in training there.

"They didn't care to postpone the wedding until today, the 13th—and, anyhow, it's bad luck to postpone a wedding.

"So they boarded a train for Rockford, taking with them Paul J. Donovan, best man, and Miss Marian McCann, bridesmaid. They summoned Father Rice from Camp Grant to St. James' cathedral and the wedding bells tinkled."

Management Displeased at Treatment of Team Here Saturday.

CALLING GAME EXPLAINED

The incidents at Fayette Field Saturday afternoon which resulted in the baseball game between the Yough Valley Independents of Dawson and the Connellsville Independents being called in the ninth inning after Steve Yanchus, right fielder for the Connellsville team, had been hit on the head by a pitched ball, may result in the abandonment of the remainder of the schedule of the Fayette-Westmoreland league, Frank A. Tarr, manager of the Yough Valley team, emphatically declared today his team would not again play at Fayette Field and he indicated there was little likelihood of an agreement to have the remaining games played on a neutral field.

Announcement was made today by Umpire G. E. Moore of Dawson that he had called the game under Section 3 of Rule 22 governing organized baseball by which the score would revert to what it was at the end of the eighth inning, 3-2, in favor of Yough Valley, and it was made known that Yough Valley will stand on this decision. Mr. Moore said the reason for the decision was that the game had been halted by circumstances over which he had no control—the overflow of the crowd onto the playing field. The rules require that the field be cleared within 15 minutes. It was 18 minutes, Mr. Moore said, when he announced that the game was called.

While members of the Connellsville club expressed a willingness to play over the whole game or that part of it beginning with the stage that had been reached when Yanchus was hit, Manager Tarr said he would not consider playing it over at all.

Manager Tarr and others of the Dawson club severely criticized Patrolman John Barnes for insisting on the arrest of players involved in a difficulty growing out of an argument as to who should run for Yanchus who was hit so hard he was compelled to retire. It was claimed Barnes used offensive language toward the players. The action of the police in arresting the men and the management in permitting it was also criticized.

There are varying stories told as to what happened during the argument over the selection of a runner for Yanchus but it ended in the police taking two of the Yough Valley players from the field and to the lockup where they were later released on forfeits. During the argument the crowd swarmed onto the field and was still there when the umpire called the game. No announcement was made at the time of the rule governing the situation.

The game was tied twice, Yough Valley scored a run in the second inning, Connellsville came across with one in the fourth. Yough Valley forged ahead in the fifth and Connellsville tied it in the seventh. The game went along at a tie until Geisie, Yough Valley first baseman, stole home in the eighth while Hauser was in the act of pitching a ball.

Hauser, Ridge and Stauffer of the Connellsville team were considerably off usual form. Hobe Fisher made a stellar catch in left and a brilliant throw to the plate, cutting off a runner, at another stage of the game.

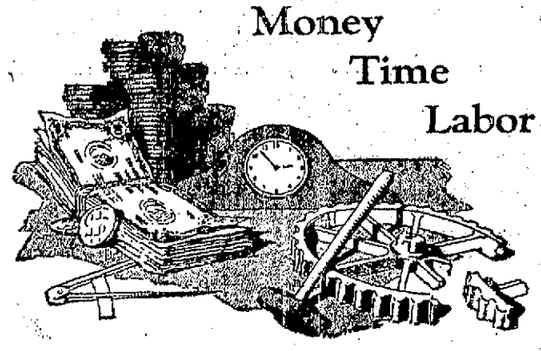
Money Time Labor



MONEY, time and labor are the three great requisites for commercial achievement. With their aid are built monuments to industry.

Business enterprise depends upon banks to adjust the problem of money in such a way as to obtain control over time and the co-operation of labor. With the bank's aid, the business man changes his credit into cash and so secures the liquid capital necessary for the rapid development of his plans. If it were not for the bank's credit facilities, he would be deprived of liquid capital, and his business would be retarded and limited to the slow growth of years.

The financial resources of this institution are at the command of merchants and manufacturers who require its aid for the successful development of their plans.

GRANDEST IN THE WORLD, SHE SAYS

"I Never Miss an Opportunity to Praise Tanlac," Says Johnstown Woman.

"I believe in passing along to others the blessings that come my way, and that is why I am telling the people about Tanlac," said Mrs. Frank N. Altors, of 146 S street, Johnstown, Pa.

"For two years I suffered from indigestion and nervousness. My appetite was so poor that just a few morsels was all I could eat at a meal, and it looked like I had hardly swallowed a mouthful of food before my stomach began to give me trouble.

"Gas formed and bloated me all up, and I had such intense pains at times they nearly took my breath away. My nerves were upset and at night I rolled and tossed by the hour, and in the mornings felt weak and worn out. Nothing helped me and I felt miserable all the time.

"Tanlac has helped me in every way. I just want to be eating all the time now and my stomach never gives me the least bit of trouble.

"My nerves are back to normal, and I get to sleep as soon as I lie down and sleep soundly till morning and wake up feeling rested and refreshed. I have gained considerable in weight and feel fine all the time. Tanlac is certainly the grandest medicine in the world and I never lose an opportunity to praise it."—Advertisement.

This quaint bonnet of white and blue taffeta has not forgotten the coquettish ribbons that are its right. Feathers and ribbons are of pale blue. Little silk flowers and blue bows finish the daintons and girdle.

At the Theatres

THE SOISSON.

"SNOW BLIND," the feature attraction today and tomorrow, is a tremendous drama of love, hate, jealousy and blind devotion. It is the kind of a photoplay that makes the spectator tingle with suspense and one that he will never forget. "Snow Blind" is not a faked picture. Every snow scene is real. To get these wonderful scenic "shots," the Goldwyn company making the picture spent a month in and about Banff, Canada, during the season of the year when the sun comes up at 10 o'clock and goes down at 3 o'clock. Outdoor scenes for the movies cannot be taken without sun, and in addition to this short period of sunlight each day, there were many days of heavy fog. Old timers said making 140 scenes in four weeks of this weather was impossible. Some of the finest snow scenes ever photographed were taken by Percy Hilburn, Goldwyn cameraman, for "Snow Blind," which is a Katherine Newlin Burt story.

THE PARAMOUNT.

"THREE SEVENS," a combination of mystery, adventure and athletic prowess, with Antonio Moreno in the stellar role, is filled with thrills. It offers the great star opportunities to perform daredevil feats that have long characterized his work. One of the strongest and most expensive casts ever assembled for a feature picture was engaged to support the star. Antonio Moreno is a man of action. He is ever striving to make his pictures show the red-blooded youth at his best. "Three Sevens" is a film of this type. It tells the story of a youth, unjustly imprisoned, with fate playing against him. This youth fights to clear his name and Antonio Moreno in the stellar role fights every step of teh way. He gets real action by entering into the spirit of the narrative and forcing the members of his company to do likewise. One of the strongest and most expensive casts ever assembled were engaged for the production. Each player is a screen favorite.

THE ORPHEUM.

"DYNAMITE ALLEN," with George Walsh, the popular Fox star, in the leading role, is the feature attraction today and tomomorrow. The story, written especially for George Walsh by Thomas F. Fallon, deals with life in the mining regions of Pennsylvania. It is a very dramatic tale, in which the hero struggles against overwhelming odds to prove the innocence of his father, falsely imprisoned for murder. He is compelled to go through a series of experiences of the most thrilling nature. His home is burned by his enemies. He is imprisoned at the bottom of the mine, which is slowly flooded. He drives a locomotive at terrific speed to an open bridge and plunges with it to the river below. A cast of marked excellence includes such well-known names as Edna Murphy, Dorothy Allen, Byron Douglas and J. Thornton Baston. "Dynamite Allen" is a production to be recommended most highly both of those who seek dynamite action and those who wish a charming love story.

Paragon Plant Construction to Start This Week

Work will be started on a factory building for the Paragon Motor Car company of Cumberland next Wednesday at the site, Mount Savage road, and construction of each unit will be expedited, it was stated positively yesterday by Philip W. Blake, president. Material for the field office has been moved to the grounds and a bridge across the run approaching the site has been started. Excavation for steel piers and concrete curtain walls for the main building will be commenced next week.

The main building will be 480 by 165 feet in dimensions, will have 215 concrete piers and 130 feet of concrete curtain walls, and will be equipped with a wood block floor on concrete base. A service garage, power house and water development unit will also be erected in conjunction with the present plans.

President Blake stated that it is the hope of the Paragon company to start production of cars by the late spring of next year.

It is the intention of the company, Mr. Blake stated, to produce a four-passenger touring Paragon to be known as "The Country Gentleman" type, in which several entirely new and novel features of the industry will be incorporated. The new model is designed to provide car efficiency and comfort in trips for the business man between the office and the country clubs of Maryland, Mr. Blake specified.

The company site is comprised of 20 acres, which is adjoined by 22 acres of additional land on which an option has been taken.

The present office, 133 Baltimore street, Cumberland, will be moved to the site about September 15.

Plans are being mad by the company to exhibit the Paragon car in New York and Chicago this fall.

MAY DETER OTHERS.

Pittsburg Gazette Times.

It is sincerely hoped that there is no mistake about the capture in London of Jesse Frazier, alias Benjamin Stokes, the hitherto missing member of the gang which perpetuated the robbery and murder in Federal street. It is essential that those who do transgress the law be apprehended as a warning to others who may have no scruples against crime, but who may be deterred by the penalties imposed. In a flagrant case no expense is too great or search too long to be justified. Such a policy is necessary unless criminals are given license to pursue their infamous business. Were the professional outlaws given assurance that detection and punishment would surely follow the perpetuation of offenses, it might not in all cases prevent the attempt, but the number of such characters would be diminished by incarceration or execution. Certainty of punishment is of greater importance than severity though it is probable that we err more often on the side of leniency than the contrary. If the worst criminals were convinced that there is no safety for them anywhere on earth, that the law would never let up in pursuit so long as they were in flight and their misdeeds were unrequited, crime might not be eliminated entirely, but there surely would be less of the kind of which the North Side case is an instance.

Frazier, or Stokes as he appears to be better known, is credited with being the "master mind" in the Federal street crime. Justice could not be satisfied so long as he should be at liberty, even though the extreme penalty were to be visited on his accomplices. While the latter as participants in the crime are as guilty in the sight of the law as the man who planned it, the law would be cheated of its due did it not have in its grasp the chief as well as his tools. That the search was made international should have a beneficial effect. If Stokes is brought here to face trial for his crime. It is regrettable that it was necessary to hunt so long and so far, but better that the fugitive be taken in London than not at all. That distance does not give safety may be a lesson not lost on others of Stokes' kind.

RAILROAD RELIEF

Philadelphia Ledger.

The railroads need the money that will accrue from the liquidation of federal control, and the sooner they get it by the passage of enabling legislation the better. It is a question not merely of the welfare of the railroads, but of the general prosperity.

The President put the case succinctly in his message to Congress on July 26 when he said:

In the case of the railroads, there is a moral and contractual obligation, and your favorable action is no less urgent (than in relief of agriculture) and will no less appeal to public approval. Railway solvency and efficiency are essential to our healthful, industrial, commercial and agricultural life. Everything hinges on transportation.

Secretary Mellon, in a letter to Chairman McFadden of the House Banking committee has urged "early and favorable action" on the so-called administration funding bill, which would enable the War Finance Corporation to allot $ 0,000,000 for the final discharge of the obligation of the government toward the carriers. It is of the utmost moment that the settlement should be reached before Congress adjourns for a recess. The sums advanced under the refunding arrangement will affect immediately 250,000 idle railway workers, and by giving them employment do much to stabilize economic conditions in general.

Directly and indirectly, it has been estimated that a quarter of the labor and the material of the country is utilized by the common carriers. It is reported that 600,000 freight cars are now standing idle, and the funding bill means not merely that the wheels of many of these will turn once more, but that general and extensive repairs in rolling stock will be undertaken. The condition of debility among cars and locomotives is illustrated by the fact that disabled cars have increased from five per cent to 16.2 per cent in first six months of 1921.

An extreme example of the national social paralysis resultant from a laissez faire policy of letting the railroads run to seed is offered by Russia, where, says John F. Stevens, as quoted by Mr. Crane, a train consists of matchboxes coupled with hairpins and drawn by a samovar. There is no risk that we shall ever even approximate such a sorry condition here. But we must not narrow the margin that divides us from it.

Careless Tourists Start Forest Fires

Because of the war, Germany lost about 21,547,520 acres of land exclusive of plebiscites. This was undoubtedly a serious national misfortune to Germany. The United States, during the period 1916-20, inclusive, burned up 56,488,307 acres of our forested area—over two and one-half times as much as Germany's entire loss—an area greater than New York and Pennsylvania combined, or of Minnesota, Kansas, Idaho, or Utah.

While it is impossible to trace the origin of all forest fires, the records of the Forest Service of the United States Department of Agriculture show that a large number originate through the carelessness of happy-go-lucky tourists. The Forest Service is anxious to encourage the use of the national forests as recreation grounds. It cooperates with plans for building fine roads through the forests, and establishes numerous free camping grounds, where shelter, water and firewood may be obtained. Many of these camps are located on main automobile highways and are easily reached. Some states provide tourist guide maps to the forests and camp sites. About 5,000,000 people, it is estimated, use the forests each year during the vacation season. At Eagle camp ground on the Columbia river highway in the Oregon national forest 132,000 tourists registered last year.

Some of the campers, however, do not seem to appreciate the pleasures and privileges afforded to the touring public. They disfigure the scenery with rubbish and filth, they disregard game laws and pollute streams, but their worst and most frequently recurring offense, according to forest officers, is the starting of destructive forest fires by carelessness either with camp fires or with smoking.

A lighted cigaret thrown into dry leaves or needles, may start a fire that will spread for miles. A camp fire not fully extinguished may be the means of destroying valuable timber which has taken hundreds of years to reach maturity. The reports of forest rangers are filled with dramatic accounts of the work involved in controlling such fires, and also in detecting and bringing culprits before a judge after following the very slight clues obtainable to a deserted camp site. Sometimes an old bottle or a pocket handkerchief will reveal the original possessor who did not put out his fire. Sometimes a particular make of automobile tire can be traced for miles and the careless camper brought to justice.

No fines, however, on the part of the local magistrates, will restore the burned area. While forest rangers are vigilant and alert to catch carelessness and prevent incipient fires, the real need, the foresters say, is for the development of more conscience on the part of the public which uses the national forests. It is greatly desired by the Forest Service that all the 147 national forests, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from gulf to border, be used and enjoyed to the fullest extent by as many people as possible. This involves universal adoption of the slogan, "Be sure your fire is out."

Harding and Cox on Soldier Bonus

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12—In connection with the discussion regarding postponement of action on the Soldiers' Bonus Bill it is recalled that both candidates for President last year went on record during the campaign as regarding with doubt the wisdom of voting cash bonuses to ex-service men. The Stars and Stripes, a weekly publication devoted to the interests of ex-service men, carried interviews with both candidates upon the subject of cash bonuses—one with President Harding, under date of September 4, 1920; and one with James M. Cox, under date of September 11, 1920. The articles were handled by Joseph R. Hefferman, of the Stars and Stripes, and both articles were widely reprinted in the daily papers of the above dates.

The following is an extract from the article of September 4, 1920, which gave the views of Candidate Harding.

"Senator Harding holds the great American family, known as the general public, must be kept in mind and earnest thought given to any plan for soldier legislation which may tend to disturb the financial machinery by which that great family transacts its everyday business. Incidentally, Candidate Harding recalled that at present there is a floating indebtedness of more than $3,000,000,000 and emphasizes in well considered words the serious problem of assimilating that debt. After remarking that a cash bonus would cost perhaps $2,000,000,000 Senator Harding said: 'Now, with our present Liberty bonds below par what would be the result if we proceeded to issue more bonds? During war, of course, the people of the country laid their all on the altar of their country just as the soldiers laid down their lives. Can we honestly say that conditions are now the same? If we did sell bonds to pay the proposed bonus and, to meet present conditions, offered a higher rate of interest than on our precious Liberty bonds, what would be the effect on those bonds outstanding?'

"President Harding, according to his interview, approved of the provisions for farm or home aid, land settlement aid, and vocational training aid, provided they could be put into effect in a practical way."

In the following week's issue of the Stars and Stripes, James M. Cox made public his opposition in regard to the cash bonus. Like President Harding, he, too, expressed preferment for legislation which gave the soldier land or homes instead of cash.

"Good Queen Bess" of England.

Elizabeth, the "Good Queen Bess" of England, whose reign from 1558 to 1603 was one of the most glorious periods in the history of her country, was the daughter of Henry VIII and his second wife, the famous Anne Boleyn. When Anne fell from favor and was beheaded, the young princess was declared illegitimate and for a time had an unhappy life. Finally, however, she was given her place in the succession, after Edward and Mary, and during Edward's reign she lived a peaceful life. While Mary was on the throne Elizabeth was more or less an object of suspicion, for it was well known that she had been brought up a Protestant, but at Mary's death in 1558 her right to the throne was unquestioned. The great issue confronting her was that of religion. She restored Protestantism, reinstated the English Book of Common Prayer and asserted the royal supremacy over the church, but she avoided fanaticism and showed herself willing to call to her aid Catholic as well as Protestant leaders.—Kansas City Star.

PUTS DIVORCE IN EASY REACH OF THE POOREST

In Switzerland Incompatibility Is Given as Cause in Half of the Cases.

Divorce is within the reach of all in Switzerland, writes S. J. Jennings in the London Daily News, and the facilities are used to a considerable extent. About 700 civil marriages take place in Geneva each year, and there are about 140 divorces.

Divorce procedure is comparatively simple. It is necessary to go to a lawyer, who prepares the case and brings it in the first instance before the Court of Conciliation. The parties appear privately before this court, and the judge endeavors to persuade them to renounce their intention and live amicably together. If he does not succeed the lawyer proceeds to collect evidence, and the matter comes again before the court after a lapse of three months. The witnesses are heard in private, but the lawyers' pleadings take place before the public court known as the Tribunal de Ire Instance. Altogether, divorce proceedings usually take about a year.

There are a large number of possible reasons for the granting of divorce, but in probably 50 per cent of the cases the reason given is incompatibility of temperament, or as it is put, in a term of rather wider significance, "incompatibilite des moeurs." This plea is, of course, a very convenient one and saves much washing of dirty linen, besides the fact that the cause which in England constitutes the most potent plea for divorce is in certain cantons of Switzerland a criminal offense.

The cost of divorce proceedings in Switzerland is never prohibitive. Divorce is available to the poorest. According to the Swiss Constitution, no citizen is allowed to suffer by reason of the fact that he is too poor to invoke the law, and if he proves inability to pay for legal representation, his costs are paid from a fund raised under a tax known as the "Droit des pauvres" (Right of the Poor). The cost of divorce, however, depends on circumstances, and witnesses are sometimes paid considerable sums to give evidence. Nevertheless, persons of small means who agree to seek divorce and have no children to complicate the situation, may hope to obtain their desire for a matter of, say, £12.

HITS AT AMERICAN SPELLING

Australian Judge Is, However, Not Supported by School Authorities.

Sir Adrian Knox, chief justice of the High court of Australia, does not approve the American method of spelling several words.

Last month an affidavit was presented in the High court, containing an extract from a letter written in the United States, in which the English "programme" was Americanized to "program." The justice said he would like Americans to know Australia is not a dependency of the United States and the spelling of English words should be done in the good old style of English spelling.

Having pointed to the spelling of "centre" as "center," his honor hoped this method of orthography was not taught in the schools.

"This is an Americanism I abhor," he added.

Referring to the incident, W. F. Gates, inspector of schools in Victoria, declared the chief justice had placed himself in antagonism to the Philological Societies of Great Britain and America and to Murray, the recognized modern lexicographer.

ALL MEN OF TEMPERAMENT

Great Research Specialists, as a Class, Far More Erratic Than Average Litterateurs.

Literary men are supposed to be like women, variium et mutabile semper, and this has turned university dons against them. I once had an argument with a very dignified but not especially literary college official, writes Frederick E. Pierce in the Literary Review. "Ah!" said he, "You literary men are so temperamental." Then he went on to sing the praises of certain great fact research stars on his faculty. I kept my tongue idle and my brain busy. Alas and alas! As if great fact research specialists were never temperamental. As if they never whitened the hair of their deans or blackened the bile of their colleagues. When Walter Scott entertained at his home the half-insane antiquary, Joseph Ritson, was it the urbane poet or the ill-balanced editor of accurate texts who was more temperamental? In the famous quarrel between Furnivall and Swinburne the noted Shakespeare scholar proved himself slightly more erratic than even the most temperamental poet of the Nineteenth century. Everybody knows that Byron got half drunk to write "Don Juan." How many realize that the great university professor Porson got one hundred and five one-hundredths drunk before lecturing to that same Byron at Cambridge? Porson, with his inexhaustible memory and unquenchable thirst, pouring out hexameters and hiccoughs to his astonished classes—was there ever a more temperamental being?

WEDDED ON DEATHBED

Made a Will and Then He Got Better.

In Philadelphia a dramatic bit of romance became public the other day when it was learned that Francis J. Donnelly, a wealthy young man, believed to be dying, wed his sweetheart on his deathbed, willed her $50,000 and then, under the stimulus of his newfound happiness, defied all laws of medicine and began to recover.

That is the only reason the physician can give for the remarkable progress he has shown in a gallant fight for life at the Abington Memorial hospital, where the belief is now expressed that he will live.

Sometime ago Donnelly was stricken with appendicitis and a hurried operation was decided upon. Alarming symptoms developed and then pneumonia set in. He expressed the desire to wed his childhood sweetheart, Miss Emma A. Lacy, and the ceremony was performed last Saturday at his bedside.

SKIRT HER BANK

Woman Produces $1,100 From Garment's Hem to Buy Stock.

S. H. Hall of Bellefonte, Pa., a stock salesman for a western Pennsylvania cereal company, had a unique experience. He visited Milesburg on a stock selling expedition and succeeded in interesting a widow to the extent that she concluded to purchase shares to the amount of $1,100.

After the necessary papers had been signed she excused herself a minute, stepped inside another room, ripped open the hem of the skirt she was wearing and took therefrom bills which she promptly presented to Hall in payment for her stock. Most of them were old and had the appearance of having reposed in the "bank" for some time.

Appropriate.

It was their wooden wedding.

"And, now, darling," said the wife, who was in one of her sweet moods, "what are you going to give me?"

"I give you myself," said the husband.

"Yourself?"

"Yes; don't you remember calling me a blockhead last night?"

Mad, Anyhow.

"One of our prominent professors gave an interview to one of the reporters with the understanding that his name must not appear in print."

"Then it evidently got into the paper."

"Yes, and now he is mad because it was spelled wrong."—Kansas Brown Bull.

He Knew.

"Your honor, this lady married a man to reform him."

"Divorce granted," said the judge briefly. "Never mind about the details."

An Amended Aphorism.

"Imitation is the sincerest flattery."

"No," replied Miss Cayenne, "flattery is the insincerest imitation."

YOUGH VALLEY REFUSES TO PLAY OUT ITS LEAGUE SCHEDULE IN CONNELLSVILLE

The trouble began after two men were out in the Connellsville half of the ninth inning. After Steve Yanchus was hit on the head by a pitched ball and compelled to retire from the game, a dispute arose as to who should run for him. This ended in the arrest of two of the Yough Valley players. When the field was not cleared within the time specified under baseball rules, Umpire Moore called the game.

CRIPPLED CAPSTAN LOSES TO EVERSON

Going into the fray with several of its players missing from the lineup, Capstan Glass was defeated by Everson Saturday, at Everson, 5-1. Jack Adams is sick. Baseball Notes.

Arrangements have been completed for the fifth and final game of the Mount Braddock-Lemont series for a purse of $600. The contest, which is expected to be one of the most exciting and best played of the series, is to be staged Thursday afternoon at 4:30 on the Reagan lot. Dunaway is scheduled to pitch for Mount Braddock, with the twirler for Lemont yet in doubt.

* * * *

The Yough Valley Independents will play Fayette City on Wednesday and the Kelly-Jones outfit on Saturday, both games to be staged on the Y. M. C. A. field at Dickerson Run.

* * * *

The Methodist Episcopal and the Evangelical Church league teams will play off a scheduled game tonight at Fayette Field. Tomorrow night the United Presbyterians will play the First Presbyterians.

Boxing Notes.

Word comes from Uniontown that Johnny Donnelly is matched to meet Charley Pitts the Australian lightweight, over the 12-round route in Jersey City, on the night of August 22. The boxing promoters of the county-seat are evidently negotiating with Johnny Ray of Pittsburg to meet Donnelly in Uniontown this fall. Billy Carter, through his manager arises to remark, that if given the opportunity to meet Donnelly that no bout would be staged with Donnelly and Ray as the principals as Carter would surely hang the crepe on the countyseater.

Johnny Pollock, the Dawson sensation, who will undoubtedly be one of the choices to show in the all star boxing show of the Fayette Athletic club's opening on September 15, has started training with his stable mate, Billy Carter. Pollock is one of the most popular boxers ever seen at the local club, as the fans know that when Johnny enters the ring, they will get a run for their money, as he is trying all the time.

HIT TAPE FIRST

Earl Eby, the great Penn miler, hasn't any patience with a fellow who devotes the most of his thinking to the time record, instead of winning the race.

"Give me the runner who can win the race," says Eby. "Time is a secondary matter. Beat the other fellow to the tape and you have accomplished the real purpose of any race."

Running against time is not sport.

Racing is competition between individuals. If you beat the other fellow, the time takes care of itself.

HISTORY REVEALED BY DEBRIS

Interesting to Speculate What Future Explorers Will Think of That of the Present Day.

When the archeologist wishes to know which of two civilizations is the older he seeks a place where the debris of one is piled upon that of the other—superposition, he calls it. Clark Wissler writes in Harper's. Again, if he wishes to determine the periods in the development of a single city he seeks out the places where the daily refuse was dumped. Naturally, the bottom of the dump is the older, the top the most recent. Experience has shown that pottery decorations and styles are subject to frequent changes and that where pottery is made numerous fragments find their way to the dump, where they form successive layers in order of their dates.

The first effective use of this method was in the valley of the Nile, where lies the refuse of the ages, in the strata of which was found the key to the history of early Egypt. The same method has been applied to the valley of the San Juan in New Mexico, in which lies the Animas river and this ruin, and to the neighboring valleys where similar ruins are found. The extensive researches of Kidder, Morris and Nelson have established a relative chronology for the pottery types in this valley.

For Industrial Cripples.

Up to May 2, 1921, a total of 24 states had enacted laws accepting the provisions of the federal act for vocational rehabilitation of industrial cripples, and providing state appropriations to match the federal grant.

TOO MANY AND LESS EFFECTIVE HURLERS

Former Spitball King Comments on Pitching of Today.

Clubs in Big Show Carry Too Many Twirlers and They Do Not Receive Sufficient Work—Batsmen Do Not Hit Harder.

Ed Walsh, once the spitball king of the big leagues, now manager of the Oneonta (N. Y.) semi-professionals, found time to comment on the baseball of today in the big shows as it strikes him. Along this line Walsh said:

"The pitchers of today are not as effective as they were years ago, because the clubs carry too many hurlers and the curvers do not receive sufficient work.

"The batsmen of today are no better than they were when I was in the big show, but are helped by new pitching rules and the use of a livelier ball.

"Years ago in the major leagues," continued Walsh, "every pitcher worked in his turn every four or five days. As a result they retained control. Now, there are many pitchers who start games only once in every ten days, with the result that when they do get on the mound they have trouble locating the plate.

"The game today has its Ruth, Hornsby, Sisler and a few other heavy hitters, but at that I don't think the batsmen are a bit more dangerous at the present time than when the Sox won the pennant and the world's championship."

Walsh is playing the outfield for Oneonta in addition to managing the club.

In Outfielders Trefry and Ramsey, who top Augusta's batting order, the Tigers claim the two fastest runners in the league. They are also among the best base runners in the Sally league.

OUTFIELD RECORD FOR RICE

Washington Player Handled 478 Chances Last Season—Max Carey of Pirates Displaced.

Sam Rice, star outfielder for the Washington Nationals, set a record in major league history last season when he handled 478 chances in the outfield.

Sam Rice.

Tris Speaker, Cleveland boss, was the first to achieve a record number of accepted chances in the outfield, then Max Carey, the Pirate preacher and outfielder, exceeded Spoke's mark, and now Rice holds the record.

HITTING KEEPS CROWD BACK

League Officials Find That General Lambasting of Ball Is Holding Attendance Down.

National league umpires are now doctoring the baseball instead of the pitchers. They're experimenting with a new chemical to take the shine off the ball. The new dope has the same effect as rosin, only it isn't as sticky.

League officials once stormed about pitchers using dope on the ball. Then, when they found that the general lambasting of the ball had hurt attendance, they rushed to the rescue.

FIELDING MARK IS EQUALLED

Third Baseman Schepner of Louisville Team Accepted Thirteen Chances Without Slip.

When Joe Schepner, third baseman of the Louisville American Association club, accepted thirteen chances without error in a recent game with St. Paul sport writers declared he equaled the major league record held by third basemen, which was made by George Cutshaw, of the Brooklyn Nationals, on August 23, 1918.

Charley (Rube) Lutzke, sent by Indianapolis to a club in the Three-I league, which turned him back after a brief trial, was then taken on by Kansas City and Manager Otto Knabe has been using him at short as a stop gap.

DEALS BLOW TO OLD THEORY

Writer Points Out Fallacy of Supposition That Prehistoric Men Were All Savages.

The notion that all prehistoric men were brutes and savages dies hard, a notion which has been spread by poets, painters and sculptors as well as by many thoughtless prehistorians. A theoretic rebuttal is afforded in the simple consideration that any tribe in which brutal and savage elements predominated would have undergone a retrogressive social and racial development and would never have attained the superb qualities which we discover in many of the Eurasiatic races immediately on their emergence from the so-called savage state. Man is not a savage because he dresses in skins and uses stone and wooden weapons; he may be savage while riding in an automobile and using a rifle. "The New Stone Age in Northern Europe," by John M. Tylor, is refreshing for those who desire to bury the primitive savage theory once for all and to give our prehistoric ancestors credit for our fundamental virtues, both mental and spiritual, as well as to excuse them for certain customs which have only recently disappeared from our own civilization. Altogether, the new Stone age covered not only a very long period of time, but one of great cultural progress, partly autochthonous, but more largely introduced from the East. The varied industries of the era, the valuable implements, the trade in salt, gold, copper and amber, the mining for flint, indicate people equal, if not superior, to the average inhabitants of the same regions of Europe at the present time.—Henry Fairfield Osborn in the Literary Review.

Like the Poor and Taxes

The pile of rocks to be broken was a very large one, though the stone-breaker as he gazed at it disconsolately between his bites at a large sandwich of bread and cheese, recounts the London Morning Post. A minister came along and gave him a cheery "Good morning," remarking afterwards that he had a deal of work to get through yet. "Aye," said the cater, "them stones are like the Ten Commandments." "Why so?" inquired the genial parson. "You can go on breaking 'em," came the reply; "but you can't never get rid of 'em."

Johnny Wilson, middleweight champion of the world, is willing to take on Georges Carpentier.

"Oh, well, then—" she said, indifferently.

"Alix, would you like to know about her?" Peter said bravely. "Her name—and everything?"

"Oh, no, please, I'd much rather not!" she intercepted him hastily, and after a pause she added, "Our marriage isn't the usual marriage, in that way. I mean I'm not jealous, and I'm not going to cry my eyes out because there was another woman—is another woman, who meant more to you, or might have! I'm going into it with my eyes open, Peter. I know you love me, and I love you, and we both like the same things, and that's enough."

Three weeks later he remembered the moment, and asked her again. They were in the valley house now, and a bitter storm was whirling over the mountain. Peter's little cabin rocked to the gale, but they were warm and comfortable beside the fire; the room was lamp-lighted, scented by Alix's sweet single violets, white and purple, spilling themselves from a glass bowl, and by Peter's pipe, and by the good scent of green bay burning. The Joyces had had a happy day, had climbed the hills under a lowering sky, had come home to dry clothes and do cooking, for Kow was away, and had finally shared an epicurean meal beside the fire.

Peter was wrapped in deep content; the companionship of this normal, pretty woman, her quick words and quick laugh, her music, her glancing, bright interest in anything and everything, was the richest experience of his life. She had said that she would change nothing in his home, but her clever white fingers had changed everything. There was order now, there was charming fussing and dusting, there were flowers in bowls, and books set straight, and there was just the different little angle to piano and desk and chairs and tables that made the cabin a home at last. She wanted bricks for a path; he had laughed at her fervent, "Do give me a whole carload of bricks for Christmas, Peter!" She wanted bulbs to pot. He had lazily suggested that they open the town house while carpenters and painters remade the cabin, but she had protested hotly, "Oh, do let's keep it just as it always was!" Smiling, he gave her her way.

CHAPTER XI.

Cherry had a flat now in Red Creek "Park." It differed from an apartment because it had no elevator, no janitor, no steam heat. These things were neither known nor needed in the crude mining town; the flat building itself was considered a rather questionable innovation. It was a wooden building, three stories high, with bay windows. Cherry had watched this building going up, and had thought it everything desirable. She liked the clean kitchen, all fresh white woodwork, tiles, and nickelplate, and she liked the big closets and the gas-log. She had worried herself almost sick with fear that she would not get this wonderful place, and finally paid twenty-five dollars for the first month's rent with a fast-beating heart. She had the center floor.

But after the excitement of moving by died away, she hated the place. She had enough money to hire a maid now, and she had a succession of slatternly, independent young women in her kitchen, but she found her freedom strangely flat.

Now and then a play, straight from a "triumphant year on Broadway" came to town for one night; then Martin took his wife, and they bowed to half the men and women in the house, lamenting as they streamed out into the sharp night air that Red Creek did not see more such productions.

The effect of these plays was to make Cherry long vaguely for the stage; she really did not enjoy them for themselves. But they helped her to visualize Eastern cities, lighted streets, restaurants full of lights and music, beautiful women fitly gowned. After one of these performances she would not leave her flat for several days, but would sit dreaming over the thought of herself in the heroine's role.

One day she had a letter from Alix; it gave her a heartache, she hardly knew why. She began to dream of her own home, of the warm, sweet little valley whose breezes were like wine, of Tamalpais wreathed in fog, and of the ridges where buttercups and poppies powdered a child's shoes with gold and silver dust. She began to hunger for home. Nothing that Red Creek could offer shook her yearning for the remembered sweetness and beauty of the redwoods, and the great shade of the mountain. She wanted to spend a whole summer with Alix.

She was athirst for home, for old scenes and old friends and old emotions! She had only to hint to Alix to receive a love letter containing a fervent invitation. So it was settled. With a sort of feverish brevity Cherry completed her arrangements; Martin was to use his own judgment in the matter of boarding or keeping the flat. Some of their household goods were stored; Cherry told him that she would come down in September and manage all the details of settling afresh, but she knew that her secret hope was that she might never see Red Creek again.

Alix met her sister at the ferry in San Francisco on a soft May morning. She was an oddly developed Alix, trim and tall, prettily gowned and veiled, laughing and crying with joy at seeing Cherry again. Peter, she explained between kisses, had had to go to Los Angeles three days ago, had been expected home last night, and was not even aware yet that Cherry was definitely arriving.

"Of course, he knew that you were coming, but not exactly when," Alix said, as she guided the newcomer along the familiar ferry place on to the big bay steamer for Mill Valley. Cherry drew back to exclaim, to marvel, to exult, at all the well-remembered sights and sounds and smells.

"Oh, Alix—Market street!" she exclaimed. "And that smell of leather tanning, and that smell of bay water and of coffee! And look—that's a cable-car!"

"We'll come over to San Francisco soon, and you'll see the new hotels," Alix promised when they were seated on the upper deck, with the blue waters of the bay moving softly past them. Cherry's happy eyes followed a wheeling gull; she felt as if the world was suddenly sunshiny and simple and glorious again. "But now, I thought the best thing was to get you home," Alix went on; "and get you rested."

"I can't get used to the idea of you and Peter—married!" Cherry smiled.

"We're well used to it," Alix declared, smiling, too. But a little sigh stabbed through the smile a second later. Cherry's exquisite eyes grew sympathetic; she suspected from the letter Alix had written that there would be no nursery needed in the mountain cabin for a while, and she knew that to baby-loving Alix this would be a bitter cross.

Sausalito, fragrant with acacia and rose blooms, rose steeply into the bright sunshine beyond the marshes skirting the bay glittering in light. Cherry's eager eyes missed nothing, and when they left the train at Mill Valley, and the mountain air enveloped them in a rush of its clear softness and purity she was in ecstasies.

She gave an exclamation of delight when they reached the cabin. It was a picture of peaceful beauty in the summer noon. There were still buttercups and poppies in the fields, and in the garden thousands of roses were growing riotously, flinging their long arms up against the slope of the low brown roof, and hanging in festoons from the low branches of the oaks. Beyond the house the mountain rose; from the porch Cherry could look down upon the familiar valley, and the rivers winding like strips of blue ribbon through the marshes, and the far bay, and San Francisco beyond.

Inside were shady rooms, bowls of flowers, plain little white curtains stirring in the summer breeze, peace and simplicity everywhere. Cherry smiled at the immaculately clad Chinese stirring something in a yellow bowl in a spotless kitchen whose windows showed manzanita and wild lilac and madrone trees; smiled at the big, smoked fireplace where sunlight fell on piled logs down the chimney's great mouth; smiled as she went to and fro on journeys of investigation. But the smile quivered into tears when she came to her own room, just such a room as little Charity Strickland had had, only a few years ago, with white hangings and unpainted wood, fresh air streaming through it, and redwoods outside.

Cherry stumbled into the airy, dark, sweet little bedroom, and somehow undressed and crept between the cool sheets of the bed that stood near Alix's on the wide sleeping porch. Her last thought was for the heavenly redwoods so close to her; she slept, indeed, for almost twelve unbroken hours.

"Oh, Sis, I do feel so deliciously lazy and happy and rested and—and everything!" said Cherry, as she settled herself at the porch table where service for one was spread.

"Cherry, you're prettier than ever!" Alix said, eyeing the white hands so busy with blue china, and the bright head dappled with shade and sunshine coming through the green rose vine.

"Am I?" Cherry said, pleased. "I thought myself that I looked nice this morning," she added, innocently. "But it is really because the air of this place agrees with me, it makes my skin feel right and my eyes feel right; it makes me feel normal and smoothed out somehow!"

"Oh, there's no place in the world like it!" Alix agreed, rubbing some dried mud from the back of her hand with the trowel. "If Martin continues to migrate every little while, I wish you could have a little house here. Then for part of the time, at least, we could be together."

"The old house," Cherry said, dreamily.

"Well, why not?" Alix echoed, eagerly. "It's in pretty bad shape, after being empty so long, but it would make a darling home again! Would Martin object?"

Cherry filled her coffee cup a second time, gave Kow an appreciative smile as he put a hot French loaf before her, and said, indifferently:

"Martin has a constitutional objection to whatever pleases me, and would find some objection to any plan that gave me pleasure!" Her tone was light, but there was a bitter twitch to her lips as she spoke.

"Oh, Cherry!" Alix said, distressed.

"However, I'm not going to talk about Martin!" the younger sister decreed, gaily. "I'm too utterly and absolutely happy!"

There was a worried little cloud on Alix's forehead, but it lighted steadily, as the happy morning wore on, and half an hour later, when she and Cherry were sailing a frog on a shingle, on the busy little streams that poured down the hill near the cabin, both were laughing like children again.

It was here that Peter found Cherry. She came up to him, and he took both her hands and, after a second of hesitation, kissed her. She freed one hand to put it on his shoulder and, standing so, she seriously returned his kiss. For a moment his arm encircled her waist; he had forgotten how blue her eyes were, with just a film of corn-colored hair loosened above them, and what husky, exquisite, childish notes were in her voice.

"Cherry—this is the nicest thing that has happened for a long, long while!" he said.

"You and Alix are angels to let me come!" Cherry answered, as they turned, and with laughter and eager, interrupted talking went back to the house.

"Cherry—This Is the Nicest Thing That Has Happened for a Long While!" He Said.

Cherry, Peter saw at once, was different in every way. Cherry was full of softness, of ready response to any appeal, of sympathy and comprehension. She had been misunderstood, unhappy, neglected; she had developed through suffering a certain timidity that was almost a shrinking, a certain shy clinging to what was kind and good.

Her happiness here was an hourly delight to both Alix and himself. She seemed to flower softly; every day of the simple forest life brought her new interest, new energy, new bloom. She and Alix washed their hair again, dammed the creek again, tramped and sang duets again. Sometimes they cooked, often they went into the old senseless spasms of laughter at nothing, or almost nothing.

One evening, when in the sitting room there was no other light than that of the fire that a damp July evening made pleasant, about a week after her arrival, Cherry spoke for the first time of Martin. She had had a long letter from him that day, ten pages written in a flowing hand on ten pages of the lined paper of a cheap hotel, with a little cut of the building standing boldly against a mackerel sky at the top of each page. He was well, he had some of his dinners at the hotel, but lived at home; he had been playing a little poker and was luckier than ever. He was looking into a proposition in Durango, Mexico, and would let her know how it panned out.

Peter had been playing the piano lazily when the letter was tossed to Cherry by Alix, who usually drove into the village every morning after breakfast for marketing and the mail. He had seen Cherry glance through it, seen the little distasteful movement of the muscles about her nose, and seen her put it carelessly under a candlestick on the mantel for later consideration. At luncheon she had referred to it, and now it evidently had caused her to be thoughtful and a little troubled.

"Mart may go to Mexico!" she said, presently, with a sigh.

"To stay?" Peter asked, quickly.

Cherry shrugged.

"As much as he stays anywhere!" she answered, drily.

"H'm! Does that mean you?" Alix asked.

This Is Better Than Laxatives

One NR Tablet Each Night For A Week Will Correct Your Constipation and Make Constant Dosing Unnecessary. Try It.

Poor digestion and assimilation mean a poorly nourished body and low vitality. Poor elimination means clogged bowels, fermentation, putrifaction and the formation of poisonous gases which are absorbed by the blood and carried through the body.

The result is weakness, headaches, dizziness, coated tongue, inactive liver, bilious attacks, loss of energy, nervousness, poor appetite, impoverished blood, sallow complexion, pimples, skin disease, and often times serious illness.

Ordinary laxatives, purges and cathartics—salts, oils, calomel and the like—may relieve for a few hours, but real, lasting benefit can only come through use of medicine that tones up and strengthens the digestive as well as the eliminative organs.

Get a 25c box of Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) and take one tablet each night for a week. Relief will follow the very first dose, but a few days will elapse before you feel and realize the fullest benefit. When you get straightened out and feel just right again you need not take medicine every day—an occasional NR Tablet will then keep your system in good condition and you will always feel your best. Remember, keeping well is easier and cheaper than getting well.

COUNTERFEITING COUP BLOCKED BY MILAN POLICE

Wealthy Manufacturer Is Held as Master Mind.

BIGGEST PLOT EVER PLANNED

Gang Duplicates Italian Treasury Bonds and Begins Passing Them—Bonds to Amount of Over Million Dollars Found in House of One of the Accomplices—Artists and Engraver Do the Work—Officer Arrests Personal Friend.

The biggest counterfeiting coup ever attempted has just been discovered by the police in Milan. The value of the counterfeited Treasury bonds found hidden in the house of one of the accomplices amounts to more than one million dollars, says a correspondent of the New York Tribune.

About two months ago a bank in Milan and another in Rome notified the police that false bonds of the face value of $10,000 were being negotiated by persons unknown. The cleverest detectives were put on the track, but no one could be caught. Simultaneously the police in Milan were looking for a man who had counterfeited the customs stamps at Saronno. Their suspicion fell on a young electrician, well known as an engraver, who was employed in the electric works; but for some time he had been missing from home.

This man, Della Vecchia, was well known among artists and esteemed as one himself. When fifteen days ago the officials of a bank again notified the police that they had heard that other $10,000 bonds had been circulated the authorities decided to search the house of Della Vecchia. The electrician was out, but his wife was at home. Posing as a collector from the works, the detective examined the meter and then insisted on searching the studio. There he found forged seals, with which the Treasury bonds must have been stamped. The wife could throw no light on the matter, and though arrested insisted on her innocence. The husband had disappeared entirely and some say he has gone abroad.

Lieutenant Arrests Friend.

With these seals as proof that the bonds had been counterfeited in Milan, the police continued their investigations and got on the track of an intimate friend of Della Vecchia, a painter, Resentini, a nightly frequenter of certain wine shops on the outskirts of Milan. The lieutenant in charge disguised himself as a Franciscan monk in search of alms and finally discovered Resentini drinking with boon friends. The lieutenant called on him, in the name of the law, to accompany him to the police station. When he reached there he confessed he knew something about the counterfeiting, but that another painter could enlighten the police further. This friend proved to be Carlo Pezzala, who had turned his studio into an up-to-date typographical office, with noiseless machines and many bronze and zinc plates. He made a full confession and told the lieutenant that the bonds were first photographed by one man and then taken to Della Vecchia, who engraved the plates, while the printing was done in his studio.

The seals, the printing press, paper and plates having been found, the next task was to find the photographer and the heads of the gang. In an effort to satisfy the police the painters decided to assist them in getting on to the track of all the others involved. They accompanied the police to the friend photographer, and by no sign or word did they betray the fact that the police were with them. Thinking that the visitors were friends and interested in the counterfeiting scheme, the photographer proudly showed his modern apparatus, his plates, the $10,000 bond, and when he had finished the police arrested him.

Though they had found the seals and machines they had not yet obtained possession of the $1,400,000 worth of counterfeit bonds. Without these their work was almost useless. Pressed for the name of other accomplices, the painters mentioned Celeste Pellaghi, a polisher of bricks; Cesare Galli, owner of a silk factory, and his partner, Carlo Meschia. The first visit was to Celeste, who was surprised to see the police. The house was searched thoroughly and were it not for information from one of the accomplices the search might have been in vain, as the bonds had been hidden behind inside shutters in a specially prepared niche. There was found the $1,400,000 worth of beautifully engraved Treasury bonds, of the value of $10,000 each.

Alleged Originator of Plot.

The last man to be arrested was the leader and originator of the plot, Cesare Galli, who now owns a silk factory worth, in the material contained therein alone, $400,000. When arrested Galli made a full confession. He said that for many years he had been working hard to regain the self-respect lost when he counterfeited government bonds some years ago. He had striven to rehabilitate himself, but was continually pursued by a longing for great wealth. Last year he thought out a great scheme, which consisted in buying real Treasury bonds, counterfeiting them and selling the counterfeits, or using them for borrowing money.

He pondered so much that he had to confess to his friend and partner, Carlo Meschia, who, far from dissuading, thought it was a wonderful scheme, and together they started working and planning. They began with a $100 bond, sold it and then bought a $200 one, sold that and continued in this way until they reached the sum of $10,000. This bond was used as a model for those afterward made and now in the possession of the police. By counterfeiting on a large scale they had hoped to use these bonds as security in their business undertakings. Were it not for the luxurious mode of life which Galli and his partner were leading in few would have suspected them.

The engraver will probably never be caught in Italy, but no doubt will continue counterfeiting wherever he lives, as it is a passion which, once it takes hold, can never be eradicated.

Fortunately, the police acted with dexterity and haste, and saved many from being deceived, as once the $1,400,000 bonds were in circulation it would have been almost impossible to recall them, owing to the effect on the financial condition of the City of Milan.

The first Bold puff will convince any man that here at last is a real 5c cigar.

LONDON HAS "SUNBURN DAY"

Air Cleared by Lack of Coal and Popular Suffers.

Whit-Monday was sunburn day in London, says the London Times. It was the most severe for at least fifty years, for, thanks to the coal stoppage and the holiday combined, the London atmosphere has become so clear of smoke that the burning rays of the sun—the so-called violet and ultra-violet rays—were no longer filtered out. You could get a good, honest sunburn in Bond street or Piccadilly.

It is an interesting scientific curiosity, and, in these days of smokeless atmosphere, worth knowing about—if one wishes to avoid red arms and face—London normally is quite safe from sunburn simply because the burning rays, which are invisible and occur at the "violet" or rather "ultra-violet" end of the spectrum, are shut out by the smoke in the city atmosphere. In the country they are not shut out, and so the town dweller soon has his pale face reddened and then tanned when he goes outside the city borders.

A great many girls got quite severe sunburns in London, and were astonished thereby. They had never experienced such a thing before. Some men, too, complained of smarting faces, "like the first day at the seaside."

CHEMISTS ARE NEEDED

Several Openings in the Government Services at Attractive Salaries.

The United States Civil Service commission states that there are openings in the government service for associate chemists at $2,500 to $3,000 a year, assistant chemists at $1,800 to $2,500 a year, and junior chemists at $1,200 to $1,800 a year. Appointees at an annual compensation of $2,000 or less will also be allowed the increase of $20 a month granted by congress.

It is stated in the Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry that the openings offer opportunities for those who are qualified in the various specializations of chemistry.

There is also need in a number of government establishments for laboratory assistants, laboratory aids, and laboratory apprentices of various kinds, requiring training in chemistry, physics, ceramics, textile technology, paper technology, civil, mechanical and electrical engineering.

IN A BURNING QUICKSAND

San Francisco Boy Sinks Into Rice Chaff. That's Afire.

Frank Sprague, age seventeen, is in a hospital in San Francisco recovering from a struggle with what in effect was a burning quicksand.

Sprague started to walk across an area in South San Francisco which is covered with rice chaff. Though the surface of the chaff seemed merely harmless sand, it was afire underneath. When his feet sank into the chaff he attempted to return to solid ground, but all his struggles only sent him deeper, until he was engulfed in the chaff as far as his shoulders.

He was able to get his feet on a solid basis then, however, and scrambling in fire, worked his way toward the edge of the chaff, burning his hands severely in scooping the stuff aside, until passersby heeded his cries and rescued him.

DIVIDE OLD NEW YORK ESTATE

Owners Sell Land Held in Family Since 1652.

The famous Moore estate at Elmhurst, N. Y., held under the same ownership since the original grant in 1652, has been cut up into building lots, which were offered to the public at auction. The sale was conducted by Joseph P. Day in a large tent on the property at Queens boulevard and Broadway. One hundred and eighty lots were sold for a total of $90,000.

Elmhurst was settled originally in 1642, when Rev. Francis Doughty and his followers came to Long Island and established New Towne. He was a nonconforming clergyman of the Church of England, who came to this country in 1637 to find greater religious freedom.

WHEN FIRE SWEEPS PRAIRIE

Man and Beast Suffer Alike Under Blistering Heat, and the Prayer for Rain Goes Up.

Hot sunlight, winds as hot, as shimmering heat which distorted objects at a distance and made the skyline a dazzling, wavering ribbon of faded blue; and then the dull haze of smoke which hung over the land, and, without tempering the heat, turned the sun into a huge coppery balloon which drifted imperceptibly from the east to the west, and at evening time settled softly down upon a parched hilltop and disappeared, leaving behind it an ominous red glow as of hidden fires, B. M. Bower writes in "Lonesome Land."

When the wind blew, the touch of it seared the face, as the smoke clung as sullied the nostrils. All the world was a weird, unnatural tint, hard to name, never to be forgotten. The far horizon drew steadily closer as the days passed slowly and thickened the veil of smoke. The distant mountain dwindled back into dimmer distance; became an obscure, formless blot against the sky and vanished completely. The horizon crouched then upon the bluffs across the river, moved up to the line of trees along its banks, blotted them out one day and impudently established itself halfway up the coulee.

Time ceased to be measured accurately; events moved slowly in an unreal world of sultry heat and smoke and a red sun wading heavily through the copper-brown sky from the east to the west, and a moon as red which followed meekly after.

Men rode uneasily here and there, and when they met they talked of prairie fires and fire guards and the direction of the wind, and of the faint prospect of rain. Cattle, driven from their accustomed feeding grounds, wandered aimlessly over the stubble-burned range and lowed often in the night as they drifted before the flame-heated wind.

Social Blunder.

"Pa made a terrible break at the wedding feast."

"What did he do?"

"After they had handed him his plate of chicken salad and the finger roll and the cup of coffee he actually grabbed a chair and sat down to eat."

Ought to Be There.

"Have you the 'Laughing Man,' by Victor Hugo?"

"I don't know, ma'am," said the new clerk, "but we have a large assortment of joke books in the rear. Step this way, please."

Baby Fussed All the Time

Sykes Comfort Powder Healed Its Skin & Stopped All Fussing

Lawrence, Mass. — "My oldest child was badly chafed, fussed all the time, and the only way I could do anything with him was to keep soft cloths next to his skin. I tried several powders but nothing helped him until I heard of Sykes Comfort Powder and sent for a box. I cannot recommend it too highly because it has healed the skin affections of my children after everything else had failed, and topped all fussing." — Mrs. E. L. Graham, Lawrence, Mass.

The reason Sykes Comfort Powder is so successful in such cases is because it contains six healing, disinfecting elements not found in ordinary talcums. For twenty years it has been used and endorsed by physicians and mothers and nurses call it "A Healing Wonder."

TEACHES BIBLE BY DUCKING

Mother Warned to Be Less Severe With Children.

Threats of a ducking in the river may be an effective method of compelling children to learn their Bible, but it does not meet the approval of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Agents of the society have recently induced a western Massachusetts mother to adopt more approved educational methods.

Investigators sent out in response to protests from neighbors learned that it was the woman's custom when any of the children failed to give strict attention to Bible study, to place the offender in a burlap bag, throw it over her shoulder and march down to the river bank. Dangling the bag over the cold water with threats of immersion usually brought quick acquiescence in her demand for closer perusal of the commandments and beatitudes.

The plan apparently had been in operation for some time, for several of the older children in the large family were found to be able to recite long passages of the Scriptures without hesitation.

Helping you get her ready for school

A STROLL through the store will show you many things that you'll need when you're ready to bundle that stalwart son or lovely daughter off to school. And you'll be pleased to find the majority of them marked in keeping with our August Clearance Sales prices.

First the little things

PERHAPS the president of the school you've selected asked you to provide bed clothing for your children. We are ready with wool and cotton blankets, bed-spreads, sheets, pillow cases—everything. All attractive both in appearance and price.

Daughter will need to prepare herself with a sufficient stock of perfume, toilet water, face powder and those other dainty accoutrements of the dressing room table. Our toilet goods department will take care of that.

And both son and daughter will need pins and needles, thread and—most important of all, woven names to be sewn on all their linen.

Come in today and let us help relieve you of some of those worries of preparation.

Then suits and dresses

SCHOOL success is largely a matter of appearance. And where is the girl who will not bring the world to her feet with one of our new Fall Suits or dresses in her wardrobe?

You'll find the strictly tailored effect in vogue again but you'll be more interested in the new fur-trimmed models—so trim and caressing are they. And the colors! Warm browns for the girl with dreamy eyes; smooth blues for eyes that sparkle. And the black that is so popular this season.

The Fall dresses and costumes will make your heart beat a little faster. Touches of color everywhere. Rich embroideries that will remind you of the robes of a mandarin. High necks, low necks—sleeves of every length—and the cleverest buttons!

Rest assured that the second floor holds many a surprise for you and daughter.

Mr. Swales can show you furs

TODAY and tomorrow Mr. Swales is in town. Which makes this the logical time to outfit daughter with her furs.

There's a coat of Hudson seal trimmed in beaver on display that would make her happy beyond measure. Another treasure is a skunk throw that carries with it all the poise and dignity of a foreign court.

Or if you prefer something less pretentious you have a collection of furs valued at over $150,000 to make your choice from.

And this will give you some idea of how much less furs cost in our August Sale. We're told that the Coney coat that cost $89.50 last season sells for $37.50 today, while the type of coat that cost $995 last year is now marked $671.25.

All of which is true because we bought the right goods at the right time and are passing the saving on to you.

We can't forget the boy

IMPOSSIBLE when there are so many articles here that a star half-back in the making will need at school.

First there are suits specially priced for August Clearance and fine to hang around school in. And topcoats very much reduced, fairly aching for some stalwart fellow to come along and walk away in them.

There are hats, also marked at Clearance prices, and many other articles that a fellow and his mother might be apt to forget—belt buckles, razors, cuff-links, shaving cream, talcum—everything a boy could need or desire.

From Scotland

FRESH from the bonnie banks and braes of Scotland comes this shipment of linen crash.

The very thing for towels you need—linen, you know, is so much more absorbent than cotton and so kind to the skin.

And, by the way, a politician friend tells us that the new tariff will materially increase the prices of all imported linens. So the wise woman buys in quantities now.

It comes 16 inches wide, in plain white or white with red border. Price is 30c to 50c per yard—very reasonable considering the quality.

A new yarn

SIG-KNIT-RING yarn they call it. It's soft, dainty and fluffy and you'll find it much stronger than straight yarn.

A ball of it weighs about 1¼ ounces and is wound on a solid spindle which means that a small ball contains as much real yarn as you sometimes find in one much larger.

The colors we have are plain black; white combined with black; red; orange; blue; purple; garnet; tan; green and cream white.

* * * * *

Ginghams!

SOME fairy princess has done it! Time was when gingham was only fit for work aprons but these new Fall gingham are really attractive. Yes and even beautiful! For you sense a certain satiny finish about them—a touch of comfortable lightness—that never was present in any other ginghams we have seen.

Their colors would thrill a poet—soft blues and rose and brown. Their price will thrill the practical for it ranges from 45c to $1.00 per yard.
